Vesuvius Causes Terror.

The hope that Mount Vesuvius was becoming calm was dissipated yesterday, when the volcano became more active than ever. The panic has spread to Naples. Two strong earthquake shocks which shattered windows and cracked the walls of buildings were experienced yesterday. The entire population rushed to the streets in terror, many persons crying: "The Madonna has forsaken us; the end of the world has come." No trace remains of Boscorease, a community on the southern declivity of the mountain, where up to 48 hours ago, 10,000 persons lived; and Torre Annunziata, on the shores of the Gulf of Naples, one mile to the southward, is almost surrounded by the invading lava, and has been evacuated by its 30,000 inhabitants. The people were carried to Naples by trains, street cars, military cars and steamships. Similar means of transportation are being employed to bring away the people from Torre Del Greco. The police and carabinieri are guarding the abandoned houses, and several members of the government also are there.

A telegram received from the mayor of San Sebastiano, a village near the observatory on the northwest declivity of Vesuvius, says the lava is approaching rapidly, and that the people are terror-stricken. They have been for nights without sleep, he says, are destitute and beg that assistance be given them.

The work of succor is hampered, owing to delays to the railway service, which is interrupted by red-hot stones, thrown to a height of 3,000 feet, falling on the tracks.

As yet it is impossible to count the craters that have opened and from which streams of lava have flooded the beautiful, prosperous and happy land lying on the southeast shores of the Gulf of Naples.

The atmosphere is heavily charged with electricity and now and then the flashes of lightning are blinding, while the detonation from the volcano resembles those of terrible explosions.

The churches of Naples were open all Saturday night and were crowded with panic-stricken people. Members of the clergy are doing their utmost to calm their fears, but the effects of their arguments go almost for naught when renewed earthquake shocks are experienced.

With the danger and horror of the situation aside, Vesuvius presents one of the most splendid sights imaginable. The mountain of fire, whose speech is by detonation and whose acts are destruction, seems like an enraged giant determined to make the pygmies of earth feel the might of his wrath. Here and there on the mountain side stand the blasted trunks of pine trees, their bare branches outstretched as though in protest against the devastation the volcano has wrought.

Prisoners in jail on the mountainside went mad with terror and mutinied, and were only partially quieted by being taken to Venice. But their fears have been communicated to the prisoners there who may rebel at any moment. The situation is critical.

Breathing is momentarily becoming more difficult because of the poisonous fumes and smoke, while the hot ashes which are still falling tend to make life a burden.

Contrary to expectations, the sea has not yet shown signs of being affected by the phenomena, but fears are entertained that tidal waves may yet come, and many craft begun put to sea. Visitors to Naples are avoiding the hotels on the sea front, and the people living there are beginning to leave for higher altitudes.

Though there is much misery, up to the present time there have been no fatalities, except at Portici, where an old woman died, supposedly from fright.

English Mason Who Betrayed His Friend.

The betrayal of a Freemason by his friend and fellow-Mason was described Friday in the divorce court during the trial of the suit by Mr. Thomas Leigh, an ironmonger, of Whitby, in Oxfordshire, for divorce on the ground of his wife's conduct with Mr. Frank French, who is also an ironmonger. Mr. French, it was stated, is a modern Dick Whittington. He went to Whitby as an assistant, married his master's daughter and succeeded to the business. Mr. and Mrs. Leigh were married in 1896, and lived happily together until April last, when Mr. Leigh heard that his wife, was receiving visits from a man on Friday evenings, when he was absent at choir practice. On April 28, instead of going to choir practice, he watched his house, and saw a man enter. He then tried the front and back doors and found them both locked, and on peeping through a window he was much surprised to recognize in his wife's visitor his friend, Mr. French. Mr. Leigh said nothing to his wife, but went to Bourne-mouth and told his story to his mother-in-law. He returned with his wife's brother, and in his presence Mrs. Leigh signed a confession that she had been guilty of misconduct with Mr. French. The suit Saturday was undenied, and the jury assessed the damages against Mr. French at $2,000. A decree nisi with costs, was granted, and Sir G. R. Barnes, in addressing the jury, said:

"This particular class of case is the worst kind of case this court has to deal with. The co-respondent has not only been guilty of immorality, but it breaks a man's faith in his fellow-men when his friend turns round on him and seduces his wife."

"It shatters a man's confidence in life. No greater wrong can be committed by a man than to betray the trust placed in him by his friend."
